Rhyming Riddles Scavenger Hunt for the book Mother Earth - Boreal Beauty of the Peace Country

| 1. My Cree name is "maskwa." In the Beaver language, I'm "sas." The French call me "ours noir." Do you know what I am? (p.242-249)                                                                                              |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 2. I have wings, but I'm not a bird. I'm not a butterfly, and I'm not a bee. My babies are called flying pups, for I am a mammal, you see! What am I? (p. 214)                                                                  |
| 3. I have legs of eight, my famous trait. I can jump for you! Would you like to take my phot too? What is the name of our eight-legged, eight-eyed friend? (p. 157)                                                             |
| 4. I have hooves, antlers and ears, but I'm not a moose, and I'm not a deer. My French name is Wapiti. I'm calling. Can you hear me? (p.226)                                                                                    |
| 5. These birds call all year long from the trees, cheering our hearts with a "Chickadee-dee."  One has a black cap; the other has brown. What two kinds of birds make this sound?  (p.103-105)                                  |
| 6. I am painted orange and yellow; my green leaves rise up below my petals. A botanical painting by Marsha Hayward reveals a flower whose name has three words. Please don't pick me! I'm a rare beauty! What's my name? (p.83) |
| 7. You'll see me in Spring; purple fuzzy flowers I bring. Even in the snow, I will pop out and grow! What kind of flower am I? (p. 56-59 and 84)                                                                                |
| 8. I am an owl who is active in the day. I come from the land of the midnight sun.  'Twas on the tundra I used to play in the summer; but it's winter, so here I come!  (p.191, 193-195)                                        |

Page 1 of 3 MotherEarthBook.ca

| 9. In the Beaver language, my name means "Bush Cat." I'm smaller than a cougar but bigge     |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| than a house cat. I was a kitten, but we kittens grow, and develop big paws for walking o    |     |
| snow. What kind of cool cat am I? (p.234)                                                    |     |
| 10. Some of us are grey and some of us are black. We howl, hunt, and hang out as a pack. He  | ЭW  |
| many Grey Wolves can you see camouflaged amongst the coniferous trees? (p. 236-238)          |     |
| 11. I can dance beautifully, but I don't have legs. How can that be? (p.268-279)             |     |
| What am I?                                                                                   |     |
| What does my name mean in Cree?                                                              |     |
| 12. If a baby goose is a gosling, is a baby moose a mosling? If not, then what? (p. 218)     |     |
| 13. Juicy and sweet, what a treat! White blossoms produce wild berries to eat!               |     |
| In the Beaver language, my name means "little heart." What kind of berry am I? (page 4-      | 4)  |
| 14. I am a symbol of promise and hope. My name in the Beaver language means                  |     |
| (p.265, 2nd Edition)                                                                         |     |
| 15. I have eyes of black and yellow; I am a feathery handsome fellow. Don't be shocked I lo  | ok  |
| surprised; I am little, with big, curious eyes! What species of owl am I? (See page 196.)    |     |
| 16. I used to be called a Whiskey Jack, but now I'm a Jay. I'm your national bird. Have you  |     |
| heard my new name? (p.186)                                                                   |     |
| 17. The Peace Country = the Peace River Watershed. Let's see how big it is.                  |     |
| The mighty Peace River starts out small in BC, but as it flows, it grows, you see!           |     |
| Add the Smoky River with the Wapiti, the Notikewin, Wabasca, and their tributaries.          |     |
| Follow it north like an eagle flying free. Hear the roar of a waterfall as wide as you can s | ee. |
| What's the widest waterfall in North America? (See pages 259-262.)                           |     |
|                                                                                              |     |

| (p.60-61) What am I?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 19. I am herbivorous, which means I eat plants. I'm a big quadruped with hooves, not hands.  My French name is bison des bois, and I roam free in the Chinchaga.  see p.216-217)                                                                             |
| 20. I'm a short-tailed weasel, and some call me vermin,  But my winter coat is white, and then my name is                                                                                                                                                    |
| 21. My name makes me sound like I belong on a horse,                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| but I grow on the ground. I'm a mushroom, of course!                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Can you guess my name? (p. 15)                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| 22. I may look like northern lights, but do not be deceived;                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| I'm an intriguing arc in the sky, and my new name is(p.275)                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| 23. We are vegetarian hydro engineers with a pool in our back yard.  The water attracts wildlife like ducks, moose, and deer.  The importance of our work is abundantly clear - to keep water on the landscape year after year, as a team we work very hard. |
| What five-fingered friend with a toothy grin is this? (p.212-213)                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 24. I am the antlered ungulate featured on your 25 cent piece.                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Rudolf is my relative; don't tease him about his nose, please!                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| What species am I? (p.229-231)                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| What is an ungulate? (p. 216)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| How many species of ungulates do we have within the Peace Country (i.e., the Peace                                                                                                                                                                           |
| River Watershed)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 25. The author who created the Mother Earth book takes pictures from way up high!                                                                                                                                                                     |
| How does she get there? Does she have wings?                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Does she know how to fly? (p.128-137, 281)                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 26. There are over 1,200 photos in the Mother Earth book. How many photographers? Did                                                                                                                                                                        |
| you look? (See the cover plus pages 142-145.)                                                                                                                                                                                                                |